Two human hepatoma cell lines (Hep G2 and Huh 7) were chosen as a model system for the study of cortisol effects on production of two proteins (alpha 1-antitrypsin and alpha-fetoprotein) present in the serum of normal individuals. Cells were incubated with cortisol at various concentrations (0-32 muM), with or without dexamethasone (10(-6)M), and with or without cycloheximide (10(-5)M). Alpha 1-antitrypsin and alpha-fetoprotein were measured in the conditioned media by ELISA and bioassay techniques, respectively. alpha-Fetoprotein production was increased in the presence of cortisol (2-7 microM) in a dose-dependent manner. The increase was observed as soon as 4 h after incubation with cortisol and attained a plateau after 24 h. alpha-Fetoprotein production was unaffected by 10(-6)M dexamethasone. The present study demonstrates that the previously reported inhibitory effect of cortisol on alpha-fetoprotein production in a few cell lines, was not observed in Hep G2 and Huh 7. Thus, the current study indicates that cortisol stimulated alpha-fetoprotein production in the two human hepatoma cell lines and does not require de novo protein synthesis.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor integrated circuit including a plurality of master-slave flip-flops, and more particularly to an asynchronous semiconductor integrated circuit. 2.
