Incredible Game About the Elden Ring (Lines from the game manual.) The action role-playing game "The Elden Ring" is made by Nippon Ichi Software. "The Elden Ring" was released on April 18, 2013 for the PlayStation®3 computer entertainment system. The NIS America store is currently selling The Elden Ring for the PlayStation®3 computer entertainment system. On April 18, 2013, NIS America, Inc. announced it will release "The Elden Ring" in North America on April 24, 2013. The Elden Ring is also expected to be released on other platforms, including Wii™. About the Author Bill Nunn is an assistant web producer at NIS America. Please email him at bnunn@nisamerica.com. The University of British Columbia (UBC) announced it will phase out the use of the beaver as its mascot in an effort to move away from a "colonial" approach to design. UBC students approved the move during a referendum in March that allowed the student union to approve the overhaul of the university's mementos, according to Nik Nanos, a pollster and founding partner of Nanos Research. The university chose the beaver as its mascot in the 1920s after it was identified by a UBC botanist as its official symbol. The university has been gradually phasing out the use of beavers as its mascot, but only announced the plan in October. Nanos said the announcement was expected. "UBC is at this point where they are saying to themselves, 'Do we want to be a colonial institution with a beaver or do we want to update our brand and go in a more modern direction?'" said Nanos, who was not involved in the decision. He said beavers can represent "a strong, colonial part of the past" in Canada and it could be a more accurate design than other options. "I think UBC has taken a huge step with it. Beavers are strong, they're intelligent, they're competent, they're clever and they're sophisticated," he said. Beaver mascot vote took place at UBC last week.
