df.rename({'columns[{}]'.format(old): new}, inplace=True)

I would like to know if there is a cleaner way to do the renaming. A: Use rename method of DataFrame:

df.rename(columns={old: new}, inplace=True)

If you want rename all columns: df.rename(columns=None, inplace=True) A: In my opinion, if you want to do this, it is always better to create a dictionary. I use the pd.DataFrame.keys() method to get a list of columns:

df.columns.values = ['2.0.0'] This is very fast and sometimes even more convenient. A: I am assuming you want something like this as an example: import pandas as pd df = pd.DataFrame(np.random.randn(10, 3), columns=list('abc')) for old, new in zip(df.columns, '
