The Leadwerks Game Engine is a game engine that is simple and requires minimal time to use. Gameplay is focused on the creation and manipulation of objects, not of code. Objects are created and easily edited with a variety of basic "brushes" that can be applied to them. Adding more brushes requires no programming skills or time, simply dragging and dropping. Brush sizes can be easily altered, and brush filters provide added control over the appearance of objects. You can easily add models and animations with the in-engine tools, from stock Leadwerks models and animations to custom ones written by users or created in any other graphics program. This version is not guaranteed to work on any computer other than those listed in the Additional Information section below. The Leadwerks Game Engine is free to use. We would love to hear about new games that you create with this engine. Send us an email at support@leadwerks.com with the subject line "Game In Development." Additional Information: You will need the following to create content with the Nature Model Pack: - The Leadwerks Game Engine - The Nature Model Pack (See the content description for details) - Optional (To add more bushes and trees): - Brushes in the Tree Collection - Brushes in the Forest Collection - Brushes in the Grass Collection How To Install: To install this DLC, select the "Workshop > Browse Workshop" menu in the main window. Select the "Subscribed" tab and choose this DLC in the list. Press the Install button, and the DLC contents will be added to your current project. What's New in This Release - All meshes re-mesh to fix modeling issues. We hope you enjoy this new look! - New Tree Mode: The tree mesh was changed to a more stable one. This also led to a handful of other fixes, and made the tree mesh easier to work with. - All meshes now have fixed origin offsets. This should eliminate modeling issues. - Split brushes into their own collection. Each of the previously mentioned tree collections are now their own brushes. - Attempted a fix to a bug when using the Brush Filter and brush sizes are set with zero to one decimals. - Implemented a fix for the Paintbrush Manager, so it will stop running if the PaintBrush object is deleted. - Fix to editing of meshes when

GUITAR - BEND OR BREAK TERRITORY EP 5 Feb 2017 Velvetekitar Growing up, I could spend hours in my room listening to two albums; the Beatles' White Album, and The Beach Boys Pet Sounds. White Album held nothing of interest. Pet Sounds, by contrast, was a masterclass in musicality and technical ability from creators of a musical package that broke down barriers of musical preference and high artistic standards in the late 60's to threaten the establishment in the wilderness of variety and collaboration. That prowess is still evident today in the high quality and quantity of new music emanating from this amazing 'stuff-slinger'. You might be thinking that Velvetechitar EP rocks. It's does. Not in the way of Beach Boys Pet Sounds though. As a result it has to be about something else. Music, for me, has always been about faking the image and shifting with the times. As a teenager I listened to punk, synth pop and hip-hop. Then Pussycat Dolls hit the mainstream and indie kids found an amazing place to express their creativity to. Soon that sound rekindled my love of hip-hop and led me to appreciate a new breed of rappers. So for the past five years, that's been the focus for me. I started clubbing a bit when I was 20 and then started getting interested in underground hip-hop. That led to asking questions about how the UK has almost become ghettoized. Where some people couldn't get to see live shows because they couldn't move a block to and from the venue. Now they could from their home, but they couldn't step across the threshold of a venue to watch any shows, which was basically to them as going to church, or working. There were no venues near their working area, save for the weekend. Now everyday, there are more and more events for hip-hop lovers to bask in. Now why not combine the two? I was fortunate to be asked to write a track for Velvetechitar with a dude I'd known online since 2009 and who was to appear on the EP. We began by collaborating on the premise I have an ideas of my own, and a producer has to pick up those clues and work with the idea given, to get that sonic idea. It's not easy work, but essentially, through a
